attention just for a minute, I'd like to introduce you to one of my -- one of my emerging young leaders, competition winners from the 58th Senate District. I have with me today Reid Schilling and his mother, Stacey, who's up in the gallery. But Reid is a fantastic young leader. In the future, he is going to be attending the University of Illinois, this fall, and studying agriculture business management. He's been very active in FFA throughout his high school career. And he wrote his -- he got selected for this -- for this award based on him writing a really great essay on the Minimum Wage Law that we just passed. So I would ask that you all give -- give Reid and his -- his mother, Stacey, who is a grade school friend of mine, a warm Springfield welcome.

PRESIDING OFFICER: (SENATOR KOEHLER)

Welcome to the Illinois Senate. Senator Collins, for what purpose do you seek recognition?

SENATOR COLLINS:

Thank you, Mr. President. For a point of introduction as well.

PRESIDING OFFICER: (SENATOR KOEHLER)

Please make your introduction.

SENATOR COLLINS:

Ladies and Gentlemen of the Senate, I would like to recognize some Loyola students that are sitting in the gallery, very promising academicians on the make, along with Phil Hale, who's Director of Communications and Public Relations and Civic Engagement for Loyola. Please welcome them to the Assembly to observe and hopefully they will witness something that will be very educational for them today. Thank you.

SENATOR HASTINGS:

Mr. President, Members of the Illinois Senate, I have an awesome opportunity to introduce two young, special people. Marvin interned for my office for three years. Unbelievably bright - that's the only thing I can tell you, that he's -- he's not only unbelievably bright, but he's just a -- a good kindhearted young man that truly wants to make a difference. And quite honestly, throughout the summer, I could have left the office and Marvin could have done a better job. I'm just going to be the first one to admit it, and I'm sure some of you would too. But I'll just say we're very lucky in the State of Illinois to have him. He's getting his Master's Degree in Public Policy from the University of Chicago. He's a product of the University of Illinois system. And I'm also proud to introduce his sister, Melanie, who's here as well. I'm assuming she'll be working for our office here pretty soon, I hope. But Melanie is studying public policy at the University of Illinois, here today. They're part of a group of students that are here advocating for higher education, how do they make an impact in our State. And it's so awesome that we have young people right now that care so much about the future of our State and the future of our country, and the work they do is truly remarkable. Mr. President, thank you very much for the time. I wish that everyone in this Chamber gives them a warm Springfield welcome. Thank you very much.

PRESIDING OFFICER: (SENATOR KOEHLER)

Yes, welcome to the Illinois Senate. Senator Collins, for what purpose do you seek recognition?

SENATOR COLLINS:

Thank you, Mr. President. A point of personal privilege.

PRESIDING OFFICER: (SENATOR KOEHLER)

Yes, please state your point.

SENATOR COLLINS:

Ladies and Gentlemen of the Senate, as we celebrate Black History Month, I stand in remembrance of Katherine G. Johnson, who died this week at the age of one hundred and one. Like so many brilliant women of color, her contributions have only recently been recognized with the reverence and respect that they deserve. She and her fellow human computers were honored in the film Hidden Figures, which documented how she and other women of NASA performed the complex calculations necessary to send human beings out beyond the boundaries of our planet. With little more than a pencil and a slide rule and one of the finest mathematical minds in the country, she helped plot the successful flight of Alan Shepard, the first American in space; she made it possible for John Glenn to become the first American to orbit the Earth; she calculated the precise trajectories that led to Apollo II's successful landing on the moon in 1969 and helped Neil Armstrong make a safe return to Earth after his history-making moonwalk. Katherine Johnson was born in a segregated country and lived to be awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom by our first African American President, President Obama. She was born when humanity was earthbound and helped humanity reach the moon. Her life and her works are an example of what can happen when we give people from all backgrounds the opportunity to participate in our grandest endeavors. I invite you all to join me in a moment of silence to honor her works and the works of all women, especially women of color, yet to be recognized for their excellence. Thank you.

PRESIDING OFFICER: (SENATOR KOEHLER)

Will all Members please be at their desk and stand for a moment of silence. (Moment of silence observed) Thank you, Senator. Leader Lightford, for what purpose do you seek recognition?

SENATOR LIGHTFORD:

Thank you, Mr. President. A point of personal privilege, please.

PRESIDING OFFICER: (SENATOR KOEHLER)

Please state your point.

SENATOR LIGHTFORD:

Or I guess it's an announcement as well. Everyone, Ladies and Gentlemen, I would love for you to just give me your attention and focus on this gentleman right here for just a moment. Dillon Santoni, he's a native of Alton. He's been here on our staff since 2016, starting as an intern, then moving to our Senate Policy and Budget staff. He's done a number of huge education initiatives. He's a great guy. We've enjoyed having him so much. I know our Chairman in Education speaks so highly of Dillon, so much so that she'd be sentimental if she had to do this send-off. So I decided to give JBT a hand and wish Dillon off in our fashion that we always do. He's going over to the State Board of Ed, so we'll still see Dillon. He will be their Legislative Director and we'll be able to see him on the other side of the table now in Senate Education. Please send Dillon off with a big warm Senate thank you.

PRESIDING OFFICER: (SENATOR KOEHLER)

Best of luck to you, Dillon.

Thank you.
